Remembering Brown

May 17 marks the 62nd anniversary of the landmark court decision, Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka. Most of us think of it as the case that ended segregated schools. It also stimulated a civil rights movement that desegregated many facets of American society. You may not know the whole story of this historic decision. Here are some interesting facts to note about Brown’s legacy:

- The backlash to Brown v. Board of Education was widespread. In 1958, for example, Virginia officials closed certain public schools rather than open them up to black students. In 1963, Alabama Governor George Wallace famously proclaimed, “Segregation now! Segregation tomorrow! Segregation forever!” By early 1964, only about one percent of black children in Southern schools attended school with whites. Those who did, often endured constant harassment. Desegregation efforts would not gather energy until the later part of that decade.

- The decision did not succeed in a wholesale dismantling of school segregation. Many districts remain racially imbalanced. Many civil rights advocates point to what they believe is a “resegregation” trend. For instance, in New York City, more than half of public schools are reportedly at least 90 percent black and Hispanic. In Alabama, nearly a quarter of black students attend a school with white enrollment of 1 percent or less.

- Academic achievement of African Americans has improved dramatically in recent decades, but racial achievement gaps remain huge.

- Schools for black children had enormous resource shortages in 1954. Inequalities still exist in some places, although they are much smaller. We also recognize that equality itself is insufficient because disadvantaged students require more resources than middle-class students to prepare for success in school. Necessary resources include high-quality early childhood programs, high-quality after-school and summer programs, full-service school health clinics, more skilled teachers and smaller classes.

- Education policy is housing policy. Schools remain segregated today because neighborhoods in which they are located are segregated. Communities are supposed to be pursuing federal-mandated residential integration. These regulations are largely unenforced, and federal programs to subsidize movement of low-income families to middle-class communities have been weak and ineffective.

- According to the Economic Policy Institute, low-income black children are currently more racially and socioeconomically isolated than at any time since the 1980s.

Correcting these policy shortcomings is essential if the promise of Brown is to be fulfilled.

Better Hearing & Speech Month

May is Better Hearing & Speech Month. It’s the time when we say thanks to the district’s speech-language pathologists and audiologists. Our pathologists, often referred to as SLPs, evaluate and treat communication disorders in children ages 3 to 21, helping them with spoken speech sounds, understanding and using words, and improving fluency and voice use in regular and special education settings.

More than 3,000 students are in the district’s speech-language program. Many of them are dealing with complex syndromes such as autism and learning or cognitive disabilities. Audiologists evaluate and monitor the hearing of all CCS students, from birth to age 22. They screen students and refer them for other professional attention when appropriate. Being able to hear in the classroom is essential since children spend at least 45 percent of the school day in listening activities. Thank your building’s SLP and our audiologists for their dedication and service to our students.

Do You Have Qualifying Insurance Event?

If you recently married, adopted or given birth, experienced a spousal job-change or other qualifying event, be sure to make changes to your insurance coverage. Members have a 30-day eligibility period to add or drop dependents and make other eligible changes to coverage. This 30-day period is calendar days, not school days. So, if you experience a qualifying event during the summer break, be sure to notify the CCS Benefits Department in a timely manner. CEA suggests that you hand carry the appropriate documents to CEC (270 E. State St.) and obtain a time-stamped copy. Here is a list of qualifying events and required documentation:

Master Teachers

Congratulations goes to our members for renewing their Master Teacher status. The Master Teacher program allows teachers to demonstrate their practice based on the Ohio Standards for the Teaching Profession. Successful completion also satisfies one of the requirements for an advanced license.

Memorial Day is a Paid Holiday

Section 1501.03 of our contract provides for certain paid holidays throughout the school year, including Memorial Day. However, pay for holidays is not a given. Members who are not in a “paid” status the day immediately preceding Memorial Day and the day immediately following Memorial Day will not receive holiday pay. If you are absent and you are not on paid sick leave or personal leave, you will forfeit the pay for this paid holiday.
