We Have Earned More “A” Grades This Year

CCS Superintendent Dan Good brought us great news. The second half of the 2014–15 Local School Report Card shows that Columbus City Schools has earned an “A” in Progress for all students in math and reading for Grades 4 through 8. Last year, our grade was “F.” Clearly, you are adding tremendous value in helping our students grow.

The report card also shows:

- 50 of the 94 elementary and middle schools subject to the state’s “Value-Added” metrics have earned an “A” or a “B”—which means students are demonstrating, on average, more than one year’s worth in math and reading each year.
- “A’s” and “B’s” in helping students who need extra attention: our gifted students, those scoring in the bottom twenty percent of achievement and students with disabilities.

Good stated, “This score highlights the commitment of our academic teams—from the teachers and instructional assistants in the classroom to the principals and administrators in the offices—to providing valuable curriculum and instruction that helps all students to grow academically every year.”

We do still face challenges. For example, 104 of our 109 schools received a “D” or “F” in meeting key performance indicators. But this year’s report shows we can help our students. We can continue to use the data to tailor instruction for every child every day. We can continue to work together to meet our children’s and their families’ needs. We can continue to raise expectations, because every child can succeed.

In the Spirit of Success, take a moment to pat yourself on the back. You have earned it.

Women Who Made History

Until the 1980s, women were virtually excluded from history textbooks. Their many accomplishments in politics, science, the arts and other areas remained relatively obscure.

But in 1981, after a series of week-long celebrations, Women’s History Month began. During March, we have a unique opportunity to teach our students about the achievements of women throughout American history. This year we honor the women who have worked to benefit our country through public service. Here are a few of them:

- Mary Madonna Ashton, CSJ served as President and CEO of St. Mary’s Hospital in Minneapolis, State Commissioner of Health under Governor Perpich, and founded St. Mary’s Health Clinics.
- Daisy Gatson Bates was a journalist and Civil Rights activist who facilitated the 1957 integration of public schools in Little Rock, Arkansas. Growing up in southern Arkansas during the early 20th century, Bates experienced firsthand the poor conditions and discrimination of the segregated school system. She spent her entire adult life standing up to physical threats and other forms of intimidation in order to champion causes of racial equality.
- Sonia Pressman Fuentes is a lawyer, author, speaker and pioneering feminist leader who fought for women’s equality in the workforce and helped initiate the Second Wave of the Women’s Rights Movement. Fuentes moved to the United States with her family in 1934, fleeing the Holocaust, and graduated first in her class at the University of Miami School of Law.
- Karen Narasaki is a Civil Rights lawyer, lobbyist, and leader who has dedicated her career to issues of Asian American equality. Her work has focused on voting rights, affirmative action, family immigration, media representation and hate crimes prevention. Narasaki is a Commissioner on the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

Each of these public leaders succeeded against great odds. The diversity of their experiences demonstrates both the challenges and the opportunities women in public service have faced. Their ability to use the art of collaboration to create inclusive solutions and non-partisan policies, as well as their skill and determination, serve to inspire future generations. The tenacity of each honoree underlines the fact that women from all cultural backgrounds in all levels of public service and government are essential in continuing the work of forming a more perfect union.

A Community In Crisis

Did you know that Columbus City Schools has lost eleven students to some form of violence just this school year alone? Four of those students are from just one of our high schools. We are a community in crisis and no one... seems to be talking about this issue. The CEA Social and Economic Justice Committee (SEJC) wants to bring this issue to the forefront.

SEJC will be sponsoring a Community in Crisis Summit on Wednesday, Mar. 23 from 6–8 p.m. at East HS, 1500 East Broad Street. We will discuss the issue of violence and its impact on our schools, as well as the potential causes of violence such as: mental health, poverty and lack of opportunity. We will also discuss recommendations for how we can improve our communities.

Please plan to join us in this very important conversation. Our students and families deserve someone who will stand up and be a voice for them.

Social Workers are Heroes

Children today are increasingly victims of many social forces that negatively affect their role as students. Many families are in a state of change and until it becomes stabilized, in whatever form, children's unmet physical and emotional needs will continue to interfere with their ability to learn and adjust in school. That is why we cherish our school social workers. This week, during National School Social Work Week, we honor their contributions.

You may not be aware that school social workers are trained mental health professionals who can assist with mental health concerns; behavioral concerns; positive behavioral support; academic and classroom support; consultation with teachers, parents and administrators; as well as provide individual and group counseling/therapy. They are specially trained to work in school districts across the country on crisis intervention; mental health assessment; counseling and linking; and referring students and families to community agencies. School social workers collaborate with school staff and community agencies to reduce or minimize barriers to student achievement and attendance. When you see one of our district social workers, take a moment to say, "Thank you for all you do for our students."
